North-West Suffers Worst Flood in its History

Scores of Lives lost by Avalanche and Floods. Train Service Practically Paralyzed in the Northwestern States.

The northwest is now in the grasp of the worst flood in its history. hundreds of lives have been lost by drownings and avalanche. The railroad situation is in bad shape, traffic being paralyzed. No trains have been run either into or out of Lewiston since Tuesday and a private dispatch from that point this morning states that a train would be run over the Palouse branch by Monday if conditions further improved to the road bed. The Clearwater line is blockaded and no trains have passed over the road since Tuesday. The condition of the road bed between Lenore and Orofino is very bad; being a succession of slides and washouts. The line above Orofino is in bad shape, but trains can be run as far up the line as the bridge crossing Lawyers Canyon creek, where two piers have been washed out and the channel of the creek changed one hundred and fifty yards distant. This bridge will have to be rebuilt entirely before traffic can be resumed above to Stites.

The towns in the Palouse country suffered severely. Colfax reporting a $300,000 loss to property. Pullman was also severely damaged by the flood.

The great loss of life occurred near Wellington, on the Great Northern, where two entire trains with passengers and crews were swept down the mountain side and lost in the canyon below. One hundred and four dead bodies are reported to have been taken from the wreckage so far. A third Great Northern train, the Oriental, was wrecked 23 miles east of Spokane and a number of lives lost.

Latest Flood News.

News received by wire from Lewiston this morning was to the effect that mail would be transferred at Julietta on the Palouse branch and brought to Lewiston Saturday afternoon. It is expected that the first train from Spokane to Lewiston will arrive Sunday.

Reports received from Red's Prairie and closely interior points state that the snow is much deeper than at this season of the year and that it is thoroughly saturated with water and likely to rise rapidly about St. Ignace. The Orofino creek is at present about three feet below high water mark.

Agent Harmon reports as we go to press that his latest advices are to the effect that a new slide came in last night near Lenore which will take four days of hard shoveling before the track can be cleared, otherwise a train would have reached Orofino Sunday. It is thought now that mail and express will be transferred Sunday at Lenore and that a train will be run to this point and perhaps Greer.

The prairie country, across the river reports severe loss by water. Nez Perce had several inches of water in the stores in the main streets, while Mohler was practically out of business for several hours. Peck was also severely damaged the flouring mill company being the principal losers.

Clagstone, Sunday Night.

The Honorable Paul Clagstone will address the citizens of Orofino Sunday night, in Old Fellows' Hall, on the prohibition question. Remember the date, March 5th.

War.

But not war between nations or revolutionary wars do I wish to write about; Only say God of this universe guides the issues of each nation to the welfare and satisfaction of the world. Every honest upright American citizen should declare war against the accursed liquor traffic, which has destroyed more victims than war, famine or pestilence combined. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe was once asked why she did not write a book against the liquor traffic, her reply was, "that would be too horrible, too shocking, I cannot". Who can picture that horrible business of our country sending its 100,000 every year to a drunkard's grave besides the untold misery and poverty following its proceedings. Chief Justice New Davis said in the Hamlet Review, "Eighty per cent of all crimes is due to intoxicants". The principle of the business is wrong. Its object is to destroy our country. It never builds up anything. It is a curse to our country. Shall we blindfold ourselves and be willing to see the way this life is slaughtering our fellow citizens and young men. Remember some of the little baby boys sleeping as sweet in the cradles and sitting at the tables in our own homes will be the price of now poor staggering drunkards. The Milwaukee saloon keeper coaxed, teased and enticed the little boys into his saloon and when remonstrated for it, said "Oh it is harmless because—the old drinkers will soon die and where will my business be if I don't get the boys." Young men of this community abstain from the first glass. Gentlemen the saloons are going out of business. Internal revenue figures from Washington show that there are 12,000 fewer saloons in the United States than there were twelve months ago. This means the closing of an average of 1000 saloons per month or 33 a day. This violation of sacred law, this breeder of lust and murder, is largely chased away from the north. All had to the south. But the lovers of God and country and homes are rising in the South. We are coming.

The DeCourcy Special.

The first train out of Lewiston on the Clearwater Short Line since the washouts of Tuesday, left the metropolis of the Clearwater promptly at 12:30 Tuesday in charge of Judge DeCourcy, of Orofino, whose nine years experience in relieving confined him to take charge of the train. The train was a special bound for Orofino and the crew consisted of Harry Walsh and W. C. Foreman. Nothing of an unusual nature happened until the big slide was encountered five miles above Lenore, when in negotiating the swift current breaking in the mountain side, fear brakeman Walsh, suddenly conceived the idea of taking a bath and before his companions could prevent him, had dove head foremost into the foamy waters and was knoed to come out after he had tied a knot around his neck with a pine tree, which was playfully frolicking in the silvery waters. Meanwhile Conductor DeCourcy, not to be outdone by his companion, and to show his contempt for mountain torrents sat down in the middle of the stream and leaning his feet, succeeded not only in holding the speeder but in stopping several tons of loose boulders which were skipping lightly down the mountain side. After some persuasion by Rear Brakeman Foreman, both Walsh and DeCourcy were induced to quit their playfulness and come out of the waters dragging the locomotive with them. From this point to Ahahka it was as the Spokane preacher said about life just one damn thing after another. When Peck was reached a council of war was held and it was decided that in the absence of railroad right-of-way it would be better to leave the "speeder" and prepare for mountain climbing then looting in the distance. Judge DeCourcy and his partner Walsh were perfectly at home on this trip and pulled off several big real estate deals, while the hillside resounded with the crashing of rocks and the ringing of the mountain torrents. Mr. Walsh stopped the entire party on one occasion while the entire party was being coaxed forward to show the beauties of a mountain of water that was tearing the hillside and which he declared he would kook if he had his machine along. Conductor DeCourcy was equally enthusiastic about the picture and the moving hillside which he said would make an excellent picture for a realistic pamphlet, showing how rapidly land moved in the Clearwater country. Meanwhile Foreman had become slightly nervous owing to the dropping of several five ton boulders in the vicinity of the party and urged that it move ahead in a point where the falling boulders were not so large and less likely to be broken on the heads of the fearless stalwart agents. After some persuasion, the party again advanced and by alternately wading and swimming reached Ahahka seven hours behind its schedule. Here the party carefully reconnoitered the North Fork bridge and the ice cakes rearing up to a point as high as the floor of the bridge and falling back with a sounding crash into the black and muddy waters. This inspiring prompt! brakeman Walsh to break forth in song and Conductor DeCourcy to stop and suggest that there ought to be some way stop the ice and store it for the summer's harvest. We stopped there, to us, painful delays by gently leading Conductor DeCourcy with his red lantern from the center of the bridge to the solid footing of the south bank of the North Fork, where after a time but painful journey of three miles the party arrived safe but weary just eight hours behind its schedule.

What the attitude of the leaders of the republican and democratic parties in the coming campaign will be on national issues is to the layman indeed problematical. The last five years has been one of the most disgraceful epochs in the political history of the United States, and the party leaders have caused to be alarmed at the outspoken denunciation of them by the voters of this country. Since the days of Calhoun, Jefferson, Henry and Adams, and the youthful days of Washington, this has been a nation in which the will of the people, by every fundamental law of the land, was paramount to the selfish interests of any class or faction; but by intrigue, deception and shrewd manipulation on the part of the party leaders and financiers, protected and encouraged by court judges of their own choice, the people have become a secondary consideration and the constitution a farce. Some of the leaders have recently so far forgotten themselves as to openly charge the voter with being ignorant and incapable of casting his ballot intelligently. Such is not the case. The average voter is not ignorant, but is generally so deeply engrossed in his private business and home life, so interested in the building up and development of the section of country wherein he lives, so imbued with the spirit of progress and achievement, that he is willing to intrust the politicians and party leaders with the affairs of state. But for years the voter has been repeatedly deceived by this sickness in the body politic. Local option is but a form of prohibition, the units being county and precinct instead of state. In our humble opinion the smaller the unit, the more absurd the workings of the party system as a panacea for this sickness to the body politic. Local option is but a form of prohibition, the units being county and precinct instead of state. it impossible for the candidates for state offices to enter the campaign with either party pride or any assurance of victory. These candidates can no longer go before the people of our state and point to the achievements of their party, but they are forced to take an independent position and make the race up on their own individual merit. It is indeed to be hoped that platform repudiation will soon cease to be the fashion.

Before another issue of The Tribune Nez Perce county shall have decided the question of liquor license or no license by the workings of the Local Option law. The selling and opening of intoxicating liquor and its regulation by law has always been a question of great moment to the American nation as it has been to all civilized governments past and present. The extremists in the United States have prohibited, or a total exclusion of liquor in any form from a given territory, and are active in the local option movement. These men and women are no doubt honest in their convictions, but so far have been unable to foster the desires of prohibition onto any political party of any consequence, and perhaps never will. The next step to prohibition is local option or prohibition on a small scale, within a prescribed territory, whose units are so small as to admit the introduction of liquor at almost any point, without the knowledge of the authorities. No given territory of small extent can possibly be made dry, as long as the human family craves drink, and the wily bootlegger is always ready to take chances. A system is soon bred, of defiance of law and authority. Those opposing prohibition hold that prohibition is an infringement on personal liberty and is contrary to the spirit of the constitution of the United States, which practically vouchsafes every citizen the right to eat and drink whatever, whenever and wherever he pleases. Local option has been adopted by many states as a panacea for this sickness to the body politic. Local option is but a form of prohibition, the units being county and precinct instead of state. In our humble opinion the smaller the unit, the more absurd the workings of the party system as a panacea for this sickness to the body politic. The Needlework Club held its meeting on Friday, Feb. 25th, at the home of Mrs. Ada Holmberg. After discussion the club decided not to take up the work of establishing a public library at present. The club will meet next Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Linn.

A committee was appointed to move in the matter of securing an extra coach on the Clearwater line and petitions will soon be presented to residents along the line asking the railroad company to make this provision. The present system whereby all are compelled to come in contact with Indians whose predilection to tuberculosis is well known, is becoming unbearable and active steps are to be taken to remedy it.
