COUNTY DIVISION LAUNCHED

At a meeting of the Orofino Commercial Club held on last Saturday night the question of county division was taken up and discussed and a resolution passed to the effect that it was the sense of the meeting that the club favored a division of Nez Perce county on lines favorable to all interested. The intent of this resolution was not to bind the club to "no division" if lines could not be adjusted satisfactorily to all, but to show the good will of Orofino, in attempting to satisfy all sections affected as near as possible. In other words to work no hardships on any section in the matter of roads and grades, topography of country, etc. considered. Mr. E. N. Brown was present and took part in the deliberations of the meeting. After some discussion a committee composed of P. H. Blake, E. N. Brown and W. C. Foresman was selected to outline a county, with boundaries ample enough to meet the requirements of the law, and assessable property sufficient to meet the state law's requirement. It was then moved that an adjournment be taken until Saturday, February 12th, at which time a smoker will be given and it is hoped that all persons interested in the matter will be present. A committee of five has been chosen to prepare an elaborate lunch for the occasion and speeches, songs and story telling will help to make the evening pass pleasantly. Let everybody turn out and help make this meeting a success.

Will the Reservation Remain Indifferent?

Reports have reached us from Lewiston and points on the Nez Perce reservation, to the effect that the reservation country was indifferent to the coming Local Option Election on account of the fact that the sale of liquor was prohibited within that territory and the law was rigorously enforced by the United States government. These statements have been made in the face of the fact that the signatures necessary to securing the forty per cent to secure the election came largely from the reservation country. With the object in view of ascertaining if this sentiment existed the writer personally interviewed a number of farmers coming into the village as to the question of voting for or against the proposed legislation. Out of the first ten interviewed eight said they had signed the petition, but did not propose to go to the polls and vote. Out of the eight signing three said they had made up their minds that if they did go to the polls and vote, they would undoubtedly vote a wet ticket, of the other five all were unanimously of the opinion that they should vote dry if they voted at all but did not feel at all concerned in the matter. Of the two who did not sign the petition, one said he would vote against it when the time came and the other said he would not go to the polls, but if he did he would vote against the measure. These ten men are sober, industrious farmers, who do not leave their farms to go to the county seat, more than once a year at least.

In an interview with K. G. Osterhaut, a prominent farmer of Nez Perce prairie and a part owner in the Orofino Electric Company as well as a stockholder in the Kookia Milling & Power Co., Mr. Osterhaut stated it was his opinion that not twenty-five per cent of the vote of Nez Perce precinct, the largest precinct on Nez Perce prairie, would be cast at the coming election. Mr. Osterhaut states this indifference is due largely to the fact that this section has prohibition and knows that the matter of the election, regardless of results, can have no appreciable bearing on this territory whatever.

Central Idaho Club Organized.

A Central Idaho Club was organized at the Lewiston State Normal this week. It was formed by Norma students in attendance from Nez Perce, Latah and Idaho counties. The club numbers about 50 members. The following students are represented by from one to eight students each: Grangeville, Orofino, Jallinetta, Kamiah, Summit, Kendrick, Southwick, Moscow, Camfield, Cavendish, Riggs, Reubens, Peck, Sequim, Caldwell, Troy, Elk City, Cameron, Tahoe, Geese, Linden, Harpster, Nez Perce, Westlake, Lookout, Perrin, Greencreek, and Kookia. The officers elected were, Miss Hulda Anderson of Orofino, president; Miss Helen Hovey of Kookia, vice-president; and Miss Etta Snow of Caldwell, secretary treasurer. The club is simply a social organization which will meet monthly in the Normal building faculty. The following members are residents of Orofino: Hulda Anderson, Mabel Holmberg and Sets Adams.

John Buescher has re-arranged the interior of his store. He has retired his grocery department to the rear and in its stead placed his boot and shoe department. The interior now presents a neat and tasty appearance and compares favorably with any store in the Clearwater country.

Clagstone to Canvass County.

Paul Clagstone, speaker of the house of representatives, was a visitor in Lewiston this week. It was rumored that Paul would stump this county for the dry forces in the present campaign. Just what effect this would have on the Brady vote is problematical. Paul is for prohibition state wide, with all the extras and has the courage of his convictions and when aided by Rufus Anderson, Stookey, Miles and Company, is apt to cut a swath through the county that will make Hailey's count next May, look small in comparison. Go to 'em Oom Paul, we like your nerve, and are willing to wager any money, that barring the Mormon counties your first and second votes will out total your competitors at the coming primaries.

Terrible Suffering

Keens All Over Baby's Body.

"When my baby was four months old his face broke out with sores, and at intervals of a few months he was again worse to a dreadful state. The sores spread all over his body. We had to put a mask of cloth over his face and tie up his hands and arms. Finally we gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a few months he was entirely cured, and today he is a fine healthy boy." — Mrs. Lora Lewis, Shelton, Maine. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures all blood diseases. Get it today in most liquid form of chocolate tablets called Sarsaparil Tablets. Dose: 1.

MAKES NEW RECORD.

Aviator Makes Nearly Mile a Minute in Curtiss Biplane.

Fresno, Cal., Feb. 6.—Before 10,000 people in this city, Charles K. Hamilton, in an eight-cylinder Curtiss biplane, broke the world's record for one mile, made by Glenn H. Curtiss in the same machine. Hamilton's record for the mile was 1:12, while Curtiss' record was 1:28. This time was made in a race with E. B. Waterman of this city in an automobile. Waterman won the race by two seconds. Later in the afternoon, Hamilton again broke Curtiss' record when he went four miles in 5:07, his average rate of speed being a mile in 1:27. As he was alighting from his last race, Hamilton crashed into a fence, breaking the horizontal rudder on his wings.

KNOCK-CENTRAL BANK PLAN.

Leslie M. Shaw Denounces Central Being Given to "Special Interests."

New York, Feb. 6.—Edward R. Yreland, chairman of the congressional committee on banking and currency, and Leslie M. Shaw, formerly secretary of the treasury, had a heated debate last night on the subject of a central United States bank. Mr. Shaw, speaking at the Republican club, opposed a central bank, saying that it would be impossible to keep its control out of the hands of the men who control the Standard Oil company and the United States Steel corporation. Of the two he preferred Morgan control.

GOOD IF 100,000 HAD DIED.

What David Starr Jordan Says About San Francisco. Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 6.—David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford university, thrilled an audience recently during his address on "Good Government," before the City club when he stated: "It would have been a good thing if 100,000 San Franciscans had died when the bubonic plague threatened San Francisco in 1907—if you could have chosen who the 100,000 were." The remark was made abruptly after a long dissertation on good government, in which he alluded his points by referring to the advance of health governmental measures. Later in his address the educator defended former Chief Forester Gifford Pinchot, saying: "It is a crying shame that the strongest administrative officer the United States had should have been forced out of office. Mr. Pinchot is gone, but every man retained in the department is a chip off the old block and the great conservationist's work will go on."

RIVER SEINE SUBSIDING.

Conditions in Paris Are Being Rapidly Improved. Paris, Feb. 6.—The river Seine is more than 13 feet below its flood maximum and the city has begun to assume its normal appearance. The streets are clear of water and the wreckage left by the flood is rapidly disappearing. Train service in all directions is being restored and some of the factories have resumed operations. In many quarters the gas and electric light services have been restored, but it will be many days before the transportation facilities, telegraph and telephone and other public utilities are to perfect working order.

Optim Conspiracy Unfolded.

Fort Worth, Texas, Feb. 7.—That a wealthy Chinaman, whose headquarters are either in Chicago or San Francisco, is at the head of an extensive conspiracy to smuggle opium into the United States, is the belief of federal officials whose investigations culminated last week in seven arrests, four in Chicago, two in Los Angeles and another at El Paso. From that city it is alleged to Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Fort Worth, the alleged syndicate uses these cities as distributing points.

Paulhan Files at New Orleans.

New Orleans, Feb. 7.—Louis Paulhan, French aviator, made three flights late yesterday in a Farman biplane at the city park race track before 30,000 spectators. He ascended to a maximum height of 435 feet and circled several times about the course, remaining in the air 13 minutes in his longest flight.

EXPRESS BUSINESS CLAIMED TO BE A TRUST

Alleges Standard Oil, Steel and Express Companies Merge Lobbies to Secure Laws.

New York.—It has become known that the investigation into the express companies, which is being conducted by Interstate Commerce Commissioner Frank Lyon, will develop sensational aspects, if the allegations of State Senator Ben E. Sundberg of Minnesota, who is the complainant, and his counsel, James Manahan of Minneapolis, can be substantiated. Manahan made public the evidence which the attorneys for the express companies have successfully kept out of the records.

What David Starr Jordan Says About San Francisco. Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 6.—David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford university, thrilled an audience recently during his address on "Good Government," before the City club when he stated: "It would have been a good thing if 100,000 San Franciscans had died when the bubonic plague threatened San Francisco in 1907—if you could have chosen who the 100,000 were." IRISHMAN OBEYS ORDERS

Saw Off Log and Takes Drop of Six Stories. New York.—Patrick Diskin, a carpenter who recently came to New York from the west, is in the Lehigha hospital because he deliberately sawed off the end of the log on which he was seated six stories above the ground. There is something surprising in the fact that Diskin is apparently not seriously injured. "It was a crying shame that the strongest administrative officer the United States had should have been forced out of office. Mr. Pinchot is gone, but every man retained in the department is a chip off the old block and the great conservationist's work will go on."

HEIRLOOM MAY CLEAR MYSTERY

Repairer's Mark in Watch Cues in Skeleton Discovery. San Francisco, Feb. 7.—No new case has presented itself to aid the officers in determining the identity of the young woman whose skeleton was found near the trail leading to the top of Mount Tamalpais last week. The detectives now depend principally upon the mark "1058 W," inscribed on the inside of the case of the watch found near the skeleton in their work. The watch is one of old make and the repairer's mark was evidently stamped in the case some years ago. These facts have led the police to believe that the timepiece is an heirloom.

CONDUCTOR MAY GO TO PRISON

Mexican Prosecutor Charges Him With Criminal Negligence. Mexico City, Feb. 7.—A telegram from Guadalajara says that the prosecuting attorney in the case of Conductor James A. Cook has recommended to the judge that the prisoner be sentenced to a penitentiary. The prosecutor charges that the American was guilty of criminal negligence, if not actually implicated, in the robbery of a freight train in his charge.

CHERRY, Ill., Feb. 7.—Five bodies of miners who last night lay in the St. Paul mine disaster last November, were discovered today in a passageway south of the main shaft, but before the corpses could be removed tons of rock and coal fell on them. It is now problematical when these bodies can be removed.

Entered as Second Class Matter September 24, 1909, at Orofino, Idaho, under No. 104 of the Postoffice at Boise, Idaho, under the Act of October 3, 1917.

Orofino people are planning to commence a campaign for county division with a view to introducing a measure in the next legislature. The move will receive the support of the majority of the business men of Lewiston who realize that the narrowing of the county boundaries around the city will not impede the development of her trade. The proposal made by The Teller some time ago that division should be discussed at a convention attended by delegates from all parts of the country should receive further consideration.—Evening Teller.

Orofino has declared herself through her Commercial Club, for county division. It is the wish of her citizens that every section concerned in the undertaking shall be consulted fully before the matter of boundaries is given definite shape. There will be nothing done in an underhand manner and all action will be free and above board. There is plenty of time for a thorough discussion of this matter before the time for final action arrives. By adopting these methods we make friends, where before by the old secret method we made enemies. Let fairness to all sections concerned be our watchword, and a policy along this line, even though we fail at Boise, will have no sore spots for the future.

Tomorrow, February 12th, we commemorate the memory and deeds of one who gave the best fruits of a useful life, together with that life, for the betterment of mankind. Abraham Lincoln not only gave the African slave his freedom, but by patience and kindness, directed by common sense he taught future generations how to live a life of self denial and as a testimonial of that life, all nations now do him reverence. To the poor and down trodden of earth, he is a patron saint, to the ambitious, he is an example of patriotism and wisdom, fit for emulation. All delight to honor his memory, for he lived and died only to the honor of his country and the uplifting of the human race.

Lewiston, through her newspapers, has voiced a sentiment for a division of the county on broad lines, favorable to all sections. This is the first time in its history that this sentiment has been sent broad cast to the world, through editorial columns of its papers, which are presumed to reflect the opinions of its citizens. The outside is now prepared to accept this friendly demonstration in good faith and to meet its expression of good will with like expressions. There is no reason for soreness between these sections, so closely bound together with ties, social, political and commercial. We believe we can and will build up a thriving and prosperous little city in Orofino, but we do not expect to be the commercial capital and distributing point for the Clearwater country. Lewiston's position in this matter is fixed by her geographic location, her railroads and her rivers, and the creation of new counties and prosperous cities will only add to her commercial prosperity. Then let us join hands in the opening up of this glorious section, so rich in resources and possibilities for the future.

Rodney thought, "The poor French workman, the widows and orphans, who had saved and starved, gave him anything they had, because he knew how to make money multiply as no one else did. He drew them pictures of the great factories and stove and hotels he would build for them with his money, and told them how by adding their little mite together they might produce something gigantic. How about those left without a cop?"

He was their own lookout," I tried to argue.

"Well," said Rodney, "the right and wrong of the sort of thing he does, but it may be that a man has no right to use his own imagination to see for other people; that he can build air-castles only for himself."

"Perhaps," I agreed; "but, as you say, if he had succeeded, he would have been a hero."

"That's all the difference. However, he didn't, and so he's an outcast," Rodney snapped. "And in addition that I've begun to long to defend the worst scapegrace the market has known in years."

I sat back on my couch and clasped my hands above my knees.

"What must we do now?" I asked at length.

"Give him up; deliver his precious self and his treasure chest to the blood-hounds."

I shook my head. "No, I can't do that. We've been too close together. They may take him, but I can't let them have me."

Rodney sat staring out of the window. "Well," said he, "I don't believe I can either, though as a broker I see my duty plain enough. I can't do it, I simply can't do it."

"Come on!" We fled down the stairs, through the open door, and hard up the stairs. Now we could see another glimpse of danger. Some of the enemy had broken through the pines, and were doing at Dupoucoau down the length of his den.

"Look!" I muttered. We stopped, breathless, panting, wide-eyed. Dupoucoau burst out from the den, which he had shot at the hidden fox. Wheeling him up to the beach, and turning, he fled straight for the ship.

"Run!" I murmured, and Rodney wheeled me; "Run, Dupoucoau, run, and may Heaven help!"

I have seen men run, but never as Dupoucoau ran that day. He seemed to skim almost to fly across that open space, and behind him came his enemies no longer firing, no longer cursing, matching their speed against his frantic flight. The Frenchman, nearest the rocks, was on them, was up and clambering over the ship's side. Then came a sharp report, and Dupoucoau quiver and hang nose over the water, as he was only half over the vessel's rail.

"Run!" I murmured, and Rodney wheeled me; "Run, Dupoucoau, run, and may Heaven help!"

I have seen men run, but never as Dupoucoau ran that day. He seemed to skim almost to fly across that open space, and behind him came his enemies no longer firing, no longer cursing, matching their speed against his frantic flight. The Frenchman, nearest the rocks, was on them, was up and clambering over the ship's side. Then came a sharp report, and Dupoucoau quiver and hang nose over the water, as he was only half over the vessel's rail.

"It's done!" I breathed.

But as he lunged toward Barbara suddenly appeared beside him and pulled him inboard, supported him across the deck, and got him as far as the cabin door before he collapsed on the boards.

Barbara disappeared, and then reappeared with something in her arms.

"The chest!" I muttered. "He couldn't forget that!"

"See Barbara lift and steady Dupoucoau on his feet, see him clutch the box on one hand, while he held a revolver in the other. He staggered across the deck."

"Come on!" I breathed, and we were off for the ship.

The chest was half way in when a new shout threatened to sound Dupoucoau's death-knell. Men came out on the cliff and stood high above him, ready to fire down on him. There was a ring about him now—enemies on the rocks, on the cliff, and men already scrambling through the water to lay their hands on him.

"Look!" I cried Rodney. I saw Barbara whisper in Dupoucoau's ear, saw him struggle up to his full height and fire at the men above him. One bullet ripped into the cliff, another shattered an arm.

We stood now on the rocks, a ston's throw off Dupoucoau looked seaward, and gave a cry. With terrible effort, he leaped to the farther rail, raised himself to plunge the box well, in his arms—into the sea and sink with it. He balanced, crouched, and then—a clear report and he fell, a leg broken, down into the water. His stand was over, the light dove; his enemies had taken him.

"I closed the paper and read it to Rodney."

"My ship has come at last. I am going to board it. I can get there alone; no one could help me if you knew all, your presence would not wish to help; I have done sufficient harm without taking you and the others farther. Ask me afterwards to pay for me. Good-by!"

I looked up at Rodney in blank amazement; and as we stood on a shot came from the beach. We turned and made for the stairs.

"The chest!" I muttered. "He couldn't forget that!"

"See Barbara lift and steady Dupoucoau on his feet, see him clutch the box on one hand, while he held a revolver in the other. He staggered across the deck."

CHAPTER XX.

From the balcony we sighted a schooner lying between the beach and the Shilling Shoal. A longboat was in the water, and men were hurrying manning it. Below us on the beach stood Dupoucoau, a pistol in either hand, fronting a half dozen of his enemies, who were between him and the cottage. I would have leaped to his help, but a glance told me that the matter was too far gone for that.

Dupoucoau fired quickly, steadily, then wheeled and ran for the house. Bullets chased him, ploughed into the sand, but he hid himself, whirled past him, but by some miracle failed to hit him. He reached the nearest sand-wall, and was hidden from us. A moment later we saw him appear, his pistols reloaded, and watched him stand again at bay and shoot. Then again he fled for the next dune up the beach, and the pursuers, then down the beach, and were after him again.

It was to be a running fight, stand and deliver, then hide, until the longboat should ground upon the beach and the fugitive spring into it. I looked to the boat and prayed that it might come quickly, but the distance was long, and the sea rough and choppy.

Again Dupoucoau appeared, and again the enemy were held at bay, and dropped and ducked and dodged as his bullets flew among them.

"I'm going to the club. I have to push out on the next train to New York. May I take you home, Barbara?"

The girl's eyes looked over at the beach, nervously, then glanced over the ship, and she had no doubtless leading again into that silence from which it had just been awakened. I saw a certain wistful smile steal into her eyes.

"No, Rodney, I don't think I'll go home just yet. I'm not in the humor to most sum and the people at the club, I'd like to sit here and think a while. "Well," said Rodney. "I've shook hands with you. "Good-by, Fallit. If you ever find this place too lonely for you, come and see me in New York. Things do happen there sometimes, though not such things as here in Alastair."

We shook hands, and I caught a glimpse of some smiling regret beneath the smile on the surface of his eyes.

As I had watched Dupoucoau, I watched Rodney disappear into the pines. The cheerful man of sea, had said farewell to the beach, but each had left a trace of himself there which I should never forget.

"The chest!" I muttered. "He couldn't forget that!"

"See Barbara lift and steady Dupoucoau on his feet, see him clutch the box on one hand, while he held a revolver in the other. He staggered across the deck."

"I'm going to the club. I have to push out on the next train to New York. May I take you home, Barbara?"

The girl's eyes looked over at the beach, nervously, then glanced over the ship, and she had no doubtless leading again into that silence from which it had just been awakened. I saw a certain wistful smile steal into her eyes.

"The chest!" I muttered. "He couldn't forget that!"

"See Barbara lift and steady Dupoucoau on his feet, see him clutch the box on one hand, while he held a revolver in the other. He staggered across the deck."

THE SAND PEAR is the only pear that is practically free from blight. It is a very rapid and continuous grower. It is a prolific bearer and requires less attention to the tree than any other fruit of its kind. The sand pear comes into bearing at an early age, and at 10 years old ordinary trees will yield 10 to 20 bushels of pears. The trees usually begin to bear at five years of age. The sixth year each tree net 25 cents, the seventh year 50 cents, and the eighth year $1, the ninth year $3 and tenth year $4 per acre. By planting 24 feet apart 75 trees can be set to the acre. This would give a net return of $300 an acre the tenth year, which would be equal to a $5000 investment at 5 per cent. This is a very conservative estimate. We have some ten-year-old trees at different places which yielded from 10 to 20 bushels and large trees which yielded from 25 to 50 bushels.

Ten acres of the sand pears, at the above conservative estimate would bring $3,000 income, or equal to a $50,000 investment, at 6 per cent.

Potatoes and Cereals.

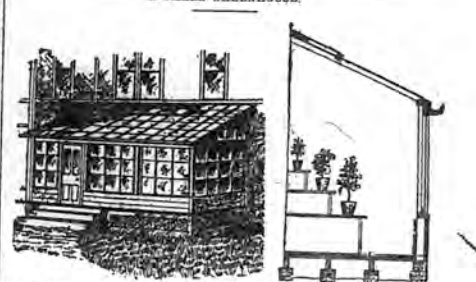

While there is much difference of opinion as to the rotation of crops on a medium heavy loam, we have had the best results from following crops with potatoes, always being careful to heavily manure the ground for the corn and not use any stable manure at all for the potato crop. By heavily manuring we mean giving the soil more than will be required by the corn and more than will be necessary to make suitable for any reserve fertilizer the corn takes from it.

The rotation of crops affords time for the disintegrating action of the atmosphere, rain and frost to prepare new material from the rock particles in the soil and get it in a form to be used by the plant. One crop may use the available food of a particular kind faster than it can be prepared by these natural agencies. When properly managed it enables one plant to prepare food for another.

All plants exhaust soil, though in an unequal degree; plants of different kinds do not exhaust the soil in other words, all plants do not restore to the soil a like quantity or quality of manure, and all plants are not equally favorable to the growth of weeds. Upon the above principles is based a regular succession of crops. The system of rotation is adapted to every soil, no particular rotation can be assigned to any one description of soil which will answer at all times, and on the demand for different kinds of produce. On clayey soils, beans and clover, with rye grasses generally alternated with grain crops, and on dry loams or sandy ground turnips, potatoes and clover. In rich soils this system of alternate husbandry is most conducive to the plentiful production of food, both for men and animals. One portion of a farm would thus be always under grass, while the other portion was growing roots or cultivated grasses; but, as the major part of arable lands can not be preserved in a state of fertility with even this kind of management, it is requisite that the portion of the farm which is under cultivated grasses should be pastured for two or three years, in order to give it time to recruit. The following is a good rotation of crops: First year, clover; second, clover; third, corn; fourth, oats; fifth, wheat. The clover does well with oats, and after an early mowing can be very well prepared for wheat.

A SMALL GREENHOUSE.

While most greenhouses are expensive to build and maintain, it is possible for an amateur to have one at small expense as well as in the open air. It steam or hot water heating cannot be provided from the house, an oil stove will maintain a high enough temperature.

A Large Poultry Farm.

Isaac Wilbur of Little Compton, R. I., has the largest poultry farm in the world. He ships from 120,000 to 150,000 dozens of eggs a year. He keeps his fowls on the colony plan, housing about forty in a house 8 ft or 9 ft high in size, these houses being about 150 feet apart, set out in long rows over the gently sloping fields. He has over 100 of these houses scattered over three or four fields. The food is loaded into a low wagon, which is driven about to each house in turn, the attendant feeding as he goes; at the afternoon feeding the eggs are collected. The fowls are fed twice a day. The morning food is a mash of cooked vegetables and mixed meals; this mash is made up in the afternoon of the day before. The afternoon feed is whole corn the year round.

Modern Farming.

The use of the most modern methods of farming is by no means restricted to the huge ranches of this country. In nearly every locality in the state farmers are using traction engines with steam or gasoline for power to plow and harrow their land. We know a ranch of 200 acres, one large for this state—on which no plowing and harrowing is done with a 20-horse-power gasoline engine. This outfit has 14-inch gang plows and the Shors' harrow, an equivalent of the distance of twenty hours. The distance traversed over tough soil is from two in two and a half miles an hour. One harrow is placed off to the side so that the result is a double harrowing of the track. It is a considerable small area to warrant the initial expense for the machine, but the owners of the ranch are satisfied that it will save its cost in a few years. The time is coming when the tedium of farm work will be held upon machinery.
