Mr. Thomas Dykes' mother has come to make her home with them.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Tunelson Wednesday evening.

Russell Ridge

The sawmills of this vicinity have been running full capacity this season.

The din of harvesting machinery is breaking the silence on this ridge.

Dobson brothers have a large crop of beans which promises a large yield and the prospect for a high price is better than for several years.

J. F. Dickson, made a trip to Angel ridge this week.

C. W. Guernsey left for the Big Potlatch Thursday.

Mr. Chandler and daughter, accompanied by Miss Edith Patchen, went to Walla Walla last week.

Charles Plank made a trip to the Potlatch after shales to cover his barn.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Guernsey part of this week.

Sam Plank started for Lewiston Monday, to be absent during the long months of harvest.

J. Dolson and family returned home after spending a week in Grangeville.

Killed any coyotes lately? If you have, and expect the county to pay you for doing so, be sure to take the tip of the nose and earn of each animal when going to claim the bounty. So ruleth the commissioners.

The commissioners of this county have passed an order requiring peddlers on foot shall pay a yearly license of $25. Peddlers traveling in wagons or other vehicles, $50. And that each peddler or solicitor taking orders for groceries, clothing, hardware or other mercantile establishments, must dig up to the tune of $75 a year in order to do business.

Mr. Wm. Hellingworth received a new threshing outfit last week at Lapore and will start it in the Larkee neighborhood soon. J. B. Omer also has a new steam rig for his place here.

Considerable harvesting has already been done. A large yield of No. 1 grain is expected.

Miss Eva Cradick, accompanied by her sister Anna and brother-in-law, Julius Hogg, expects to visit Pomeroy in the near future.

Miss Maud Crumpecker of Sempeter, was a visitor at Southwick the past week.

Human Kindness

This world is all too crowded with people who, through misfortune or inheritance, have a claim on human sympathy and whose appeals are not always recognized. It is easy to say that "God cares for the sparrows," and that "His great love and watchfulness can never neglect or overlook the weakest of His creatures," and it is so easy to stink responsibility and say, "why should I be interested in Let their friends care for them," that the poor and unfortunate are all too frequently neglected. In higher civilization all-vices people are coming more and more to recognize the fact that while God creates and governs, much of his work is delegated to human hands inspired by willing and loving hearts; that practical duty means more than prayer and song, and that the great brotherhood of the human family is not only universal, but should be so closely united in the bonds of human sympathy that the weak of every description and age should share care and helpful protection. The man or woman who serves God best is the man or woman that serves humanity best. It isn't the long prayer or Sunday down alone, but it is the working in the vineyard and searching in the highway and by ways of life for opportunities such as the Master never failed to find in the little Judean territory so many years ago. He never wanted any time telling what He was going to do, never advertised His coming or said much about His plans and purposes, but, "He went about doing good," leaving "an example and a record of his faithfulness that like half approached." Christian people like to listen to His words of counsel and wisdom as He proclaims them from the mount. They like to tarry at the cross, and drop a tear at the tomb, but many times they are slow to follow. Him in the every day work of life, forgetting that of the drudgery and sacrifice is wrought a character that is an enduring as time itself. It was possible for the Master 2000 years ago to touch a few blind eyes and open them to the sunlight, to unstop a few deaf ears and let in the Lazarus melody; to stand at the tomb of the widow's son, and by the tips of the widow's son, and comfort mourning hearts by restoring loved ones, but the mission was brief and the field limited. While it is not possible for human hands to possess the "mighty touch" or human tongues to speak His life-restoring words in miraculous ways, it is possible today, all over Christendom, to follow His unique life in many ways of practical helpfulness. It is not only possible to do this, but it is a privilege of the highest honor. The spirit of human kindness as inspired by a touch of the Master, and when fairly appreciated and more universally recognized, the waste of society will be more difficult to discover, because some stronger life has taken them up in a closer relation than a common brotherhood, which is too often only a title.
